D: Decision-making game

We are now going to play a game. This is a game we designed to understand how people make decisions when outcomes are uncertain.

There are two types of cards. You will notice that the two types of cards are each marked by a different colour: red and blue. Imagine that red represents red fish and blue represents blue fish that you can catch. There are thirty different red cards and thirty different blue cards. Each card has a value in pesos. In this game we will be asking you to choose a between cards/fish 30 times.

This game has been played by other Chilean artisanal fishers/divers/collectors in Region V. It is important to note that all previous fishers/divers/collectors faced the same choices as you will be facing. It is also very important to note that cards, either red or blue, can be of high or low pay because of luck. However, one of the colours, on average, will pay higher more often. Your objective is to make as much money as possible through your choices. The choices are yours alone; I cannot advise you and I do not know which color is better. Do you have any questions so far?

In each of the thirty rounds, I will show you two cards, one from each deck and ask you to choose one. Simply state or point to the card you would like and I will flip over the card to reveal your earnings. To help you discover the higher paying deck, after the third round, I will offer you the opportunity to buy information about what the most successful player chose. For example, once you have chosen in the third round, for 15 pesos I will tell you what the most successful player chose in that round, which will be subtracted from your earnings. You will have the opportunity to buy this type of information in every round after and including the third, but the cost of this information will go up by 15 pesos in every round this information will cost 420 pesos the thirtieth round. You will be paid at the end of the survey once I am able to calculate your winnings. The maximum you can win is $4200 pesos. Do you have any remaining questions before we begin?
